

How much does our credit management service cost?

When considering the cost of our credit management solution, you should compare it to the cost of living with poor or even average credit. Over the course of a 30 year home loan, a person with average credit may end up spending tens or even hundreds of thousands of dollars more in interest payments than someone with good credit. And the extra payments are even more dramatic if you have poor credit; providing you can even get approved for a mortgage loan in the first place.

$100,000 home paid over 30 years:

CREDIT STATUS	RATE	PAYMENT	COST OF BAD CREDIT
Perfect	6.4065%	$626	$0.00
Mildly Damaged	7.581%	$705	$10,440
Damaged	12.5015%	$1,067	$158,760

The benefits of having a good credit score are not limited to helping you get into a home. Almost any lender who offers credit will take your credit score into account. This means that improving your credit score may help you get approved for a car loan, credit card, home equity loan, debt consolidation loan or other personal loan at a lower interest rate.

Even further, many entities are now using your credit score to make different sorts of decisions about you. In today's society, increasing your credit score may also help you lower your insurance premiums, get an apartment and possibly increase your chances of landing a new job.

Healthy credit is more important than ever.

Like it or not, credit is a necessity. From the house that you live in to the car that you drive, your credit score impacts almost every facet of your life. With the price of housing and transportation now on the rise, it has become more important than ever to achieve and maintain a healthy credit score.

For those with poor credit, increased interest rates may further inflate the cost of living, making even trivial purchases seem difficult. A poor credit score can cost you hundreds each month in interest payments, or can keep you from getting approved for credit altogether. Poor credit affects more than your finances, it can also attack your sense of security, and limit your personal freedom.

Can you afford to wait? Take the next step to control your credit future now.
